Sarah Emma Edmonds was born in New Brunswick, Canada, in 1841. She was a bright and curious child, and she loved to read and learn about the world. When the American Civil War broke out in 1861, Sarah was eager to do her part to help the Union cause. However, she knew that women were not allowed to fight in the war, so she decided to disguise herself as a man.

Sarah cut her hair and put on men's clothing. She then took the name Frank Thompson and joined the 2nd Michigan Infantry Regiment. Sarah quickly proved herself to be a brave and skilled soldier. She fought in several battles, and she was eventually promoted to the rank of sergeant.

Sarah's secret was eventually discovered, but she was not discharged from the army. Instead, she was allowed to continue fighting as a woman. She became a nurse and helped to care for the wounded soldiers. Sarah also worked as a spy, and she gathered valuable information for the Union army.

Sarah Emma Edmonds was a remarkable woman. She was brave, determined, and resourceful. She fought for what she believed in, and she made a difference in the world. One Girl's Strength at Vicksburg is her story, and it is a story that should be told.
